The Medical Management of HIV/AIDS

The medical care of HIV/AIDS patients continues to become more complex. Optimum clinical care depends on understanding more sophisticated concepts of pathogenesis and laboratory monitoring. To keep pace, we invite you to join a distinguished faculty for a Comprehensive Update in HIV Management from December 13 - 15, 2007 in San Francisco, California.

This course provides the active intermediate to advanced HIV clinician with a comprehensive review of the science and application of HIV therapy. Lectures are presented by a group of leading clinicians and researchers who are also dedicated to teaching in their area of expertise. Topics addressed include current dilemmas in antiretroviral therapy, post exposure prophylaxis, common metabolic and drug toxicities as well as HIV/HCV/HBV co-infection. This course is designed to familiarize attendees with the latest concepts in HIV science and medicine. Ample time for discussion is included.

In recognizing the many challenges arising from the improvements of HIV therapy, the lunch hour on Thursday and Friday, and Friday afternoon will be dedicated to focused small group sessions on relevant topics.

Now in its 19th year, this symposium is well designed for practicing HIV clinicians including internists, family practitioners, infectious disease specialists, nurse practitioners and physician’s assistants.

This symposium is presented by the Division of AIDS – Positive Health Program, San Francisco General Hospital, Department of Medicine, University of California, San Francisco, School of Medicine.

An attendee completing this course should be able to discuss:

• Recent changes in the epidemiology of AIDS nationally and globally;
• New developments in the understanding of HIV pathogenesis;
• Antiretroviral resistance and current strategies for salvage therapy;
• Current recommendations for the management of occupational and sexual post exposure prophylaxis (PEP), HCV and/or HBV co-infection with HIV;
• New developments in HIV-related dermatologic, pulmonary, HIV transplant, HIV related renal, neurological and psychiatric disease.
