FRIDAY - SATURDAY
October 6 - 7, 2017
The Asian population has grown rapidly in the nation over the last decade, presenting major challenges in healthcare to provide culturally-appropriate care and eliminate healthcare disparities. Over half of the Asian community are immigrants with unique cultural and language needs. In light of that, the Asian Health Institute at the University of California, San Francisco kicked off an Asian Health Symposium series in 2012 with the aim to educate healthcare providers on the specific health and healthcare needs of Asian patients.

The 6th Annual Asian Health Symposium will highlight several specific areas for this unique community, including cancer, gastrointestinal and cardiovascular diseases, nephrology, endocrine, geriatric, and infectious disease, with special emphasis on the differences in the care of Asian patients in these targeted disease areas.

This unique symposium is one of the very few CME programs in the nation that can help bridge the knowledge and practice gaps of the healthcare community in treating Asian patients, especially the disadvantaged immigrants, on the many diseases and health issues that have significant impacts on them. The speakers not only are all experts in their respective specialty areas, they also have experience serving many Asian patients.

TARGET AUDIENCE
Designed for family and primary care physicians, internists, and specialists, as well as nurse practitioners, physician assistants, nurses, pharmacists, and other healthcare providers who face the unique health care needs and challenges of their Asian patients.

OBJECTIVES
After attending the two-day symposium, attendees will be able to:

- State Asians' demographics and their relevant social determinants of health;
- Name two common barriers that prevent Asian participation in clinical research;
- Identify myths in patients' perception of radiation risks;
- State the perioperative management for liver transplant;
- Employ cutting-edge technology in cancer screening and treatment for colorectal, lung, liver and gastric cancers;
- State two most common types of irritable bowel syndrome;
- State the most common form of motility disorders in Asians;
- Identify screening used in the evaluation of dementia and major depression in the Asian elderly;
- Describe major challenges, misconceptions and barriers to palliative care;
- Describe impacts as a result of policy changes of the Affordable Care Act;
- Overcome the disparities in heart diseases, atrial fibrillation, diabetes, renal disease and resistant hypertension in Asian Americans;
- Conduct fracture risk assessment and treatment in Asian patients;
- State the efficiency of infertility treatment in Asians;
- Describe the major barriers in the screening and appropriate treatment of Hepatitis B, Hepatitis C, tuberculosis and C. difficile infections in Asians.

6th Annual Asian Health Symposium
